Meet The Bulls

Pat Williams

Executive Vice President and General Manager

The question most asked about Pat Williams, the Bulls bright young general manager, last year was: What can he do for an encore? In Williams' first year, the Bulls had drawn a total attendance of 331,671 for 33 games, an average of slightly better than 10,000 a game. And this in a town the critics said would not support pro basketball.

But any notion that Williams was a one-year wonder was dispelled last season when 424,000 fans marched through the Stadium doors in an expanded 41-game home season. Not one to rest on his laurels, Williams then went out and pulled the coup of the year in pro basketball, the signing of sensational Howard Porter from Villanova University.

Williams' success with the Bulls comes as no surprise to those who have followed his career. Originally a baseball executive, Pat was named minor league executive of the year in 1967 by The Sporting News. And when he switched to basketball, with the Philadelphia 76ers in 1968, his promotional ability produced a new all-time attendance mark in the City of Brotherly Love.

Meet The Bulls

Dick Motta

Head Coach

It took Dick Motta only three years to transform the Chicago Bulls from a mediocre also-ran into a top contender for NBA honors. While he was at it, he transformed himself from an unknown coach at an unknown small college into the NBA's coach of the year for 1970-71.

Motta earned this accolade by guiding the Bulls to their first winning season ever and what a season it was! Winning 51 and losing only 31 in the regular season, the Bulls had the third best record in the entire league.

Their second place finish in the tough Midwest Division earned them a playoff spot for the second consecutive season.

Motta, whose teams at Weber State College in Ogden, Utah, won six Big Sky Conference championships in nine years, wins with old-fashioned discipline.

He runs a disciplined offense and insists on—and commands—the respect of his players. The 40-year-old coach of the Bulls was born in Medvale, Utah, and is a graduate of Utah State University. He began his coaching career at Grace (Ida.) Junior High School.

Motta lives in Northbrook with his wife, the former Janice Fraser, their two sons and a daughter.

Meet The Bulls

Phil Johnson

*Assistant Coach,
Chief of Scouting*

When the chance came for Phil Johnson to rejoin Dick Motta, he jumped at it. Johnson, 30, spent four years as an assistant to Motta at Weber State College and then served as head coach there for three years after Motta left to coach the Bulls in 1968.

In his three years as Weber State's coach, Johnson's teams lost only 15 games and qualified for the NCAA playoffs all three years. Johnson lost only five games in the Big Sky Conference and was named coach of the year in 1969, 1970 and 1971.

Johnson played for Motta in junior high school and again at Weber Junior College. He was captain of the basketball team while at Utah State.

Johnson signed a three-year contract with the Bulls. He will aid Motta in coaching and serve as chief of scouting.

Johnson and his wife, Ann, have two sons. He has a Masters degree in physical education and she is an English teacher.

Ben Bentley

Public Relations Director

The Chicago Bulls' public relations director, Ben Bentley, is the veteran of the Bulls' front office staff. Bentley was there, serving as the "Voice of the Bulls," when the club was organized in 1968. Since then, front office personnel has changed but Bentley endures.

And he is displaying the same boundless enthusiasm and energy that earned him national renown as a public relations specialist for such noted big-time boxers as Joe Louis, Rocky Marciano and Cassius Clay.

Ben and his wife, Jo, live in Chicago with daughters Iris, 14, and Michelle, 12.

Meet The Bulls

Dr. Robert Biel

Trainer

This is Dr. Robert Biel's second tour of duty as trainer of the Bulls. The Chicago College graduate first filled that role while in medical school when the Bulls were organized in 1966-67. He returned for the 1970-71 season after a three-year absence during which he still kept his ties to the team by handling training chores for the rookie and training camps.

A practicing podiatrist, Dr. Biel's background and experience qualify him to handle the frequent foot and ankle injuries far better than the average trainer.

Dick Gonski

Director of Sales

A native Chicagoan, Dick Gonski, 29, played varsity basketball and baseball at DeLaSalle High School and played three years of varsity baseball at the University of Notre Dame. In 1964, he was named to the college baseball All-American team.

Gonski subsequently was signed by the Milwaukee Braves and played one year of minor league baseball.

Three years of sales work with New York Life Insurance Co. and two years in industrial relations with Interlake Inc. prepared him for his current assignment as director of sales for the Bulls. He joined the Bulls' organization on Oct. 1, 1969.

Gonski, who is married and has three children, resides in South Holland, where he is active as a coach in the South Holland Babe Ruth league.

Video Voice of the Bulls

Jack Brickhouse

WGN-TV, Channel 9

Jack Brickhouse has covered baseball for Channel 9 since the station's first telecast and for the past several years has been the voice of the Chicago Bears on WGN Radio. When the Chicago Bulls began their first season as a member of the National Basketball Association, he was called on to describe the action on Channel 9.

He entered the broadcasting profession at the age of 18 on radio station WMBD in his home town of Peoria, Ill., and at that time was the youngest sports announcer in the nation.

After broadcasting sports at Peoria for six years, Jack joined WGN to cover sports for the Mutual network and WGN.

Jack, vice president and manager of sports for WGN Continental Group Stations, has been primarily identified as a sports announcer, but his broadcasting career is one of versatility.

In addition to his regular broadcasts and telecasts over WGN Radio and Television, Jack has covered several World Series, All-Star baseball and football games, bowl games, Golden Gloves bouts and championship fights.

Jack and Mrs. Brickhouse, the former Nelda Teach, have one married daughter, Jean.

The Chicago Bulls' Attendance Story

The Chicago Bulls made believers of the skeptics who once said professional basketball would never draw in Chicago. After a slow start, the Bulls have nearly doubled their attendance figures in the last two years.

Here are the attendance totals for the club's five years in the National Basketball Association:

YEAR	ATTENDANCE	AVERAGE PER GAME
1966-67	171,793	4,772
1967-68	131,165	3,975
1968-69	151,608	3,790
1969-70	333,668	10,050
1970-71	414,857	10,118

The Chicago Bulls Are Thinking BIG

The Chicago Bulls surprised everybody, including their own coach, last year when they emerged as a genuine force in the National Basketball Association. Dick Motta was hoping for 45 wins from a team which had never in its three previous seasons won as many as 40.

Instead the Bulls ended up winning 51 games while losing only 31 to post the third best record in the entire league! In the over-all standings they were only one game back of the defending champion New York Knicks.

Unfortunately, however, the Bulls were in the strongest division in the league. All four Midwest teams finished at better than .500 and it was a real accomplishment just to make the playoffs.

When the Detroit Pistons started the season by winning 12 of their first 13 games there were many who felt the Bulls had no chance, despite a good start of their own. After all, the Milwaukee Bucks, with Lew Alcindor and Oscar Robertson, were going to win the division championship weren't they?

Yes, they were, but it was the Chicago Bulls, not the Detroit Pistons, who were going to finish second. After a disheartening loss midway through the campaign at least one Chicago sportswriter wrote the Bulls off.

But the players would not quit. They controlled their own destiny in the final two weeks of the season when they beat the Pistons home-and-home and followed up with a two-game sweep over the Phoenix Suns, by then their only challenge, in the Stadium.

The Bulls made their best showing ever in the postseason playoffs when they carried the Pacific champion Los Angeles Lakers to seven games before losing. The home court advantage was evident as neither team managed to win a game on a foreign court.

The Bulls had the best chance, opening up a 17-point lead in the second half of the first game and finally losing by a point. That was the key game of the entire series, as it turned out.

The success on the court was reflected at the turnstiles when 424,000 fans marched into the Chicago Stadium for the 41-game home season. The Bulls also sold out the Stadium, not once, but several times, a feat that was once considered a wild dream.

With the signing of Howard Porter of Villanova, one of the top five college players in the country and the winner of the most valuable player award in the NCAA tournament, the Bulls have strengthened themselves even more for the 1971-72 season.

They also signed their No. 1 choice, Kennedy McIntosh of Eastern Michigan to further strengthen themselves at forward where, with Chet Walker and Bob Love, they already had the best combination in the league.

With another year of experience behind them, the improving Bulls cannot be blamed for thinking that this year they may make another dramatic leap—right into a world championship.

Meet The Chicago Bulls

14 JACKIE DINKINS F 6-5 210 AGE 21 PRO 0 YRS. VOORHEES COLLEGE

Even Jackie Dinkins was surprised when the Chicago Bulls made him their ninth draft choice preceding the 1971-72 season. Other NBA clubs had contacted the four-year standout at Voorhees (S.C.) College, but not the Bulls. But the Chicago club had solid facts on which to base the selection. Its scouts knew that Dinkins had ranked No. 1 nationally with a 31.8 scoring average and a 72 per cent shooting mark in statistics compiled by the National Association of Intercollegiate Athletics (NAIA). They knew also that he averaged 30 points or more for three straight years, had picked off 15 rebounds a game as a senior and earned third team honors in the NAIA national selections after his senior year. They had also been told that Dinkins could block shots, handle the ball like a guard while playing in the front court, shoot with either hand and score from inside and out. They also liked his quickness and aggressiveness. At Voorhees, Dinkins majored in business administration.

Meet The Chicago Bulls

4 JERRY SLOAN 6-5 200 G-F AGE 29 PRO 6 YRS. EVANSVILLE

Just about everybody in the NBA regards the Bulls' Jerry Sloan as one of the finest all-round performers in the league. Everybody, that is, but Jerry himself, who is constantly pushing himself to the outer limits to prove his worth.

The 6-foot-5 captain of the Bulls, who has played both guard and forward over the last couple of seasons, plays a relentless, all-out game at both ends of the court that has caused considerable pain both to himself and Bulls' opposition.

Frequent injuries have cost Jerry valuable court time, although last season he missed only two games while scoring a career high of 1462 points.

He refuses to let the fear of injury change his style. "I can't stop to think about getting hurt," he says. "Most of the guys out there are better than me and I have to prove I belong with them."

Sloan has proved that to everybody's satisfaction but his own. In addition to his 18.3 scoring average last season, Jerry hauled in 701 rebounds, second highest on the team. He was once again voted to the All-NBA defensive team.

An All-State prep star at McLeansboro (Ill.) High School and a small college All-American at Evansville, Jerry was obtained from the Baltimore Bullets in the expansion draft before the 1966-67 season. He is the last of the original Bulls.

21 JIM KING 6-2 175 G AGE 30 PRO 8 YRS. TULSA

It was supposed to be a case of "wait till next year" with Jim King, but the Bulls reaped some unexpected early dividends after obtaining the 6-foot, 2-inch guard from Cincinnati early last season.

Because of injuries that had hampered King ever since the 1968 season, when he was elected to the All-Star team, Coach Dick Motta had planned to use him sparingly, if at all, while waiting for his hurts to heal.

But King not only got into 55 games, he even took over the coaching reins when Motta was thrown out of a playoff game. King's record as a coach: 1 and 0.

King was an original choice of the Bulls in the expansion draft, but was traded to the San Francisco Warriors in the Guy Rodgers deal before that first season began. He is now in his ninth season as a professional and the Bulls are his fourth pro team.

Meet The Chicago Bulls

10—BOB LOVE 6-8 215 F AGE 28 PRO 6 YRS. SOUTHERN U.

The Bulls had their own "Love story" last season and it was every bit as popular in Chicago as the book and movie. Bob Love, a surprise success when he earned a starting role for the first time in four NBA seasons in 1969-70, proved last season that it was not a fluke.

Playing 43 minutes a game, Bob became the first player in Bulls' history to score more than 2,000 points in a season, scoring at an average of 25.2 points a game. In addition, he was a strong defender, usually assigned to the opposition's best forward.

The highlight of his season came in the annual All-Star game when the 6-foot 8-inch star from Southern University pumped in 13 points in the first half to lead all scorers to that point. He saw only seven minutes of action in the second half as his West team defeated the East, 108-107.

A measure of his worth to the Bulls last season is the fact that Love finished seventh in the balloting for the NBA's most valuable player.

Bob was obtained in a trade, along with guard Bob Weiss, from the Milwaukee Bucks in the middle of the 1968-69 season.

It was not a case of Love at first sight because the Bulls, like the Bucks and Cincinnati Royals before them, kept Bob on the bench for the rest of that campaign. But the next year they turned him loose with dazzling results.

Love averaged 21 points that season and finished either first or second on the club in 10 of the 13 other statistical categories.

44 CLIFFORD RAY 6-9 235 C AGE 22 PRO 0 YRS. OKLAHOMA

The Bulls may have gotten more than they bargained for in 6-foot, 9-inch Clifford Ray, a jackrabbit center from Oklahoma. The Bulls drafted Ray for his speed (he runs the 440 in 50 seconds, incredible for a big man) and rebounding (he led the Big 8 last year).

But Cliff appears to be improving as a shooter, too.

Ray, who did not play basketball until his senior year in high school, averaged only 8.7 points a game through his first two years at Oklahoma. But last season he averaged 13.1 while grabbing 325 rebounds. While not a polished performer on defense, Ray is an adept shot-blocker.

The Bulls expect improvement on both offense and defense as soon as Ray makes up for the experience he didn't get in high school.

18 TOM BOERWINKLE C 6-11 270 AGE 26 PRO 3 YRS. TENNESSEE

Tom Boerwinkle continued his steady improvement last year and as he enters his fourth season the Bulls' burly center must be classed as a solid pro. Long Tom hiked his totals in every offensive category a year ago, improving his scoring average from 10.4 to 10.8, his field goal percentage from .449 to .485 and his free throw percentage from .664 to .724.

In addition, the rugged Boerwinkle hauled down 1133 rebounds, also a personal record. Although he never will score or block shots like a Lew Alcindor, Boerwinkle has made himself valuable in other ways. He sets a mean pick and last season led the club in assists with 397. In Chicago's pattern style of offense both of these assets are of paramount importance.

A graduate of the University of Tennessee, Boerwinkle's improvement as a pro appears to be following his collegiate pattern, where he progressed from a clumsy sophomore to become the Bull's No. 1 draft pick in his senior year.

As a Bull, Boerwinkle has demonstrated the same capacity for hard work and it has been paying off. Perhaps he is now ready to graduate into stardom.

31 JIM FOX 6-10 220 C AGE 28 PRO 4 YRS. SOUTH CAROLINA

Like the Army football juggernauts of the World War II era, the Chicago Bulls now have a "Mr. Inside" and "Mr. Outside." "Mr. Inside" is Tom Boerwinkle, the rugged 6-11 center, and "Mr. Outside" is Jim Fox, his 6-foot-10 backup man.

Fox, entering his second year with the Bulls, provided the change-of-pace the club needed last season whenever he came in to spell Long Tom. A fine outside shooter and one of the fastest big men down the court in the league, Fox often was able to inject new life into the Bulls' attack whenever it appeared in danger of slowing down.

Obtained from Phoenix for guard Clem Haskins before the start of the 1970-71 season, Fox quickly adapted himself to the Bulls' style of play, which calls for the center to handle the ball more—and shoot it less—than on most clubs.

Fox's shooting percentage of .485 tied Boerwinkle for second best on the club. Because of less court time, Jim's point average dipped from 12.9 to 9.7, but his value as a team player increased.

25 CHET WALKER 6-7 220 F AGE 31 PRO 9 YRS. BRADLEY

Like fine wine, the Bulls' Chet Walker seems to get better with age. In his second season with the Bulls the 6-foot, 7-inch veteran from Bradley University had the best season of his career, averaging 22 points a game to crack the magic 20-point barrier for the second year in a row.

Long acclaimed as one of the finest one-on-one players in the game, Walker teams with Bob Love to form the best tandem of forwards in the NBA. Walker, then a seven-year veteran with the Philadelphia 76ers, was acquired in a trade for Jim Washington before the start of the 1969-70 season.

He was an instant hit with the fans as well as with his teammates, who began to look for "The Jet" in tight situations. The way Walker has responded to the pressure is one of the key reasons for the team's making the playoffs in his two seasons with the club.

Walker played for the West squad in last January's NBA All-Star game, a highlight in a season in which he scored in double figures for the ninth successive year.

8—BOB WEISS 6-3 185 G AGE 29 PRO 6 YRS. PENN STATE

Some basketball players are better as starters and some are better coming off the bench. Bob Weiss proved last season that he is equally adept at either. Used much of the season as the sixth man, the Bulls' 6-foot, 3-inch guard did an excellent job of firing up the team when he came onto the court.

Then, used as a starter in the playoffs, he was largely responsible for helping the Bulls carry the Los Angeles Lakers into a seventh game. Perhaps the most important play he made all season came early in the year against the defending champion New York Knicks, when Bob shoveled in a twisting over-the-head shot in the final seconds.

That earned the Bulls a three-point play, a coveted victory over the Knicks and the scornful sour grapes of New York's Willis Reed that it was "a schoolyard play."

Schoolyard play or not, it gave the Bulls the victory that convinced them they could compete against any team in the league.

Weiss came to the Bulls along with Bob Love in the 1969 trade that sent Flynn Robinson to the Milwaukee Bucks.

Meet The Chicago Bulls

22 JIMMY COLLINS 6-2 175 6 AGE 24 PRO 1 YR. NEW MEXICO STATE

If you ask Pat Williams why the Bulls did not draft a playmaking guard this year, Pat will tell you: "Because we've already got one. His name is Jimmy Collins." Collins was the Bulls' first draft choice a year ago but he spent much of last season sitting next to Coach Dick Motta on the bench.

Far from being discouraged, Collins concedes: "I knew I wouldn't come in here and be an immediate starter. I realize I've got to be patient—I've got a lot to learn."

The 6-foot, 2-inch guard, who grew up in Syracuse, N. Y., and played his college ball at New Mexico State, is a fine jump shooter and in college was known as a prickly defensive player.

"But more than any other phase of my game I've got to work on defense," he says. "Whoever says they don't play defense in the pros is crazy."

Collins, who was a mass communications major and ran a disc jockey show at New Mexico State, plans a career in broadcasting.

42 CHARLIE PAULK 6-8 215 F AGE 25 PRO 2 YRS.

When the Bulls traded starting guard Matt Guokas for Charlie Paulk, there were those who wondered what a team already rich in forwards needed with another one. The explanation is simple. "He's a fine ball player," says Pat Williams, Bulls vice-president and general manager. "When he was a college senior he was the fourth best player in the entire draft."

There is another reason the Bulls wanted Paulk. At 6-feet, 8-inches, Charlie can not only play forward, he can be used to spell centers Tom Boerwinkle and Jim Fox on occasion.

Charlie was the Milwaukee Bucks' No. 1 draft choice in 1968 but played in only 17 games the following fall before being inducted into the army. He was serving in Viet Nam when he heard he had been traded to the Cincinnati Royals.

Last year, in his first full season as a pro, Paulk averaged 9.5 points a game while seeing limited duty in 65 games.

Meet The Chicago Bulls

40 KENNEDY McINTOSH 6-7 215 F AGE 22 PRO 0 YRS. EASTERN MICH.

When the Chicago Bulls chose Kennedy McIntosh as their No. 1 draft pick, a local sportswriter asked cynically: Who is Kennedy McIntosh? From the standpoint of national publicity the question may have been a fair one, but basketball insiders and every fan in the state of Michigan already knew the answer.

A contemporary of Spencer Haywood, the 6-foot, 7-inch college center, who will be a forward in the pros, was rated with Haywood as the best pro prospect in the state when both were high school stars in the Detroit area.

Nothing he subsequently accomplished at Eastern Michigan University altered that assessment. Beginning with his freshman year, when he elbowed his way into the starting lineup, the determined young man erased all his school's season and career scoring and rebound records, including the 4-year point record of Harvey Marlatt, who preceded him into the pro ranks.

Altogether, McIntosh totaled 2,219 points and 1,426 rebounds in a glittering career that was climaxed when he led the Hurons to a second place finish in last year's NAIA tournament.

54 HOWARD PORTER 6-8 220 F AGE 23 PRO 0 YRS. VILLANOVA

When Howard Porter was just a freshman at Villanova, knowledgeable basketball fans in the Philadelphia area were already panting eagerly: "Wait until you see this kid Porter play next year."

Now it's the Chicago Bulls' fans who are anxious to get a look at their team's new super-star.

And no wonder. If his college credentials are any indication, Porter is that rare bird in the NBA, a forward who can both shoot from the outside and crash the boards with muscle.

Porter maintained a consistent average of between 22 and 23 points a game in each of his three collegiate seasons and in addition hauled down 15 rebounds a game.

The 6-foot, 8-inch forward led his team to second place in last March's NCAA tournament and was a near-unanimous choice as the tournament's most valuable player.

NBA RULES

N.B.A. Rules are the same as the college rules with the following exceptions:

1. All games will be played in four 12-minute periods.
2. Each player is permitted six personal fouls. Four personal fouls per team allowed per quarter. If a team has not committed its quota of four team fouls during the first ten minutes of each quarter or its three team fouls in the first three minutes of any overtime period, it shall be permitted to incur only one team foul during the last two minutes of each regular quarter and the last two minutes of any overtime period without penalty.
3. Substitutions are allowed at any time except after a score.
4. The free-throw lane is to be bound by two lines 16 feet apart.
5. Any player who is fouled and injured and cannot attempt his foul shot and must be removed from the game for a substitute cannot re-enter the game. His substitute is to be selected by the opposing coach.
6. In a double foul situation, no shot is attempted.
7. A zone defense is not permitted. After the offensive team has advanced the ball to its frontcourt, a defensive player may not station himself in the key area longer than three seconds if it's apparent he is making no effort to play an opponent. Three second count starts when the offensive team is in clear control in frontcourt.
8. When a team is reduced to five eligible players, these players must finish the game, except in case of injury. Anyone of the last five players in the game, upon committing his sixth personal foul, shall be penalized by a technical foul in addition to the personal foul.
9. During the last two minutes of a regulation game, the clock stops on all dead balls.
10. The 24-second rule—The offensive team is required to shoot at the defensive team's basket within 24 seconds after obtaining possession of the ball. Failure to shoot at the basket within the required time will result in the loss of the ball.
11. All personal fouls by players of the offensive team, while such team is in clear control of the ball, shall be penalized by having a personal foul charged against the offensive team player and loss of ball out of bounds on the nearest spot where the foul occurred. There shall be no team foul charged in this situation.
12. Backcourt fouls are two-shot fouls.
